COO NOTE 10 – 200313 – TUTOR.COM STANDS READY

During this uncertain time, personnel are reminded that Tutor.com remains available to all military and civilian personnel and their families. It can help students stay on course while temporarily out of the classroom and can help fill time with constructive learning experiences.

Tutor.com is aware of the disruptions military families around the world may experience because of COVID-19. Students may especially need extra support if their schools suspend regular operations or relax attendance requirements and instead deliver instruction online or provide self-study materials.

The Tutor.com team is committed to lessening the impact of school closures and other interruptions to daily routines. Their academic tutors can alleviate stress by helping students understand and complete self-study assignments, homework, writing projects and more. Perhaps most critically, they can help keep students engaged and feeling supported when their routines change.

Given the potential for disruption to so many, please remember that Tutor.com/military program as an additional resource:

You and your family members, especially the students, are encouraged to log in to Tutor.com/military for help with self-study materials, homework, test prep and more.

You can Connect with them on Facebook to find and share their updates with your community: facebook.com/TutordotcomForMilitary

The Tutor.com team is here to help. Please email militarysupport@tutor.com if you want to brainstorm how Tutor.com can help you support military families during this difficult time. And, most important of all, please take care of yourself and your family.

https://military.tutor.com/home

Further dissemination of this is not only authorized but is highly encouraged. Please share this information.